

Interprofessional Communication

Interprofessional Communication

Interprofessional communication is a process of promoting and maintaining effective working relationships with learners, practitioners, patients, families and communities to enable optimal health outcomes. Interprofessional collaboration is crucial in healthcare settings to explore the experience of interprofessional communication among nurses. The aim of this workshop is to train nurses in understanding how to communicate with other health professionals in a respectful and responsible manner to promote a patient-centered approach in healthcare.

Learning Outcomes

- Define interprofessional communication
- Discuss the importance of interprofessional communication in healthcare settings
- Identifying facilitators and inhibitors of interprofessional communication
- Explain various phases of interprofessional communication
- Demonstrate SBAR communication tool in various clinical scenarios
- Apply effective interprofessional communication skills in clinical practice

Training Material

- Multimedia audio visual aids
- Handouts

Learning Activity

- Discussion on various clinical scenarios
- Interactive activities
- Communication games
- Knowledge assessment

Duration

4 hrs

Number of Participants

50